Why the change to a Monday?

Traditionally, our meeting had been held on a Sunday afternoon. Toward the end of 2018, we surveyed our membership and learned that the majority of survey participants would like us to hold our Annual Meeting on a weeknight.

Why attend?

As a member, you are an owner of the credit union. Our Annual Meeting of membership is where the volunteer Board of Directors and the President/CEO present our 2018 statement of condition and provide a brief overview of updates for 2019.

Election of Directors

The Board of Directors consists of nine fellow members, elected by the membership, who are entrusted with the responsibility of the general direction of the credit union. Click here to learn who the candidates for the Board of Directors are. Beginning Monday, April 22, we invite you to review the link above for each candidate's mini-biographies and videos.

Voting

In 2018, we introduced online voting for our Board of Directors election and saw a significant increase in members voting. Due to this, we're expanding our online voting time period. Voting through Online Banking and at any of our locations will be available: Monday, April 22 to Thursday, May 9, 2019.

Who can vote?

Fox Communities Credit Union primary account holders (first name listed on the account) who:

1. Are at least 18 years old
2. Have at least $5.00 on deposit (membership share)
3. Have had their account open on or before February 13, 2019 (3 months before our Annual Meeting)

Navarino Nature Center – May Happenings

Mushrooming with Matt

Saturday, Sept. 21, 2019 at 9 am – Noon

Matt Welter has been studying fungus across Wisconsin for 25 years. He will be hosting a 2 hour nature hike from the Navarino Nature Center and back. This will be held during the peak of fall mushroom season. Matt will help identify dozens of mushrooms and impart knowledge from edibility to insipidness, from humorous ways of remembering mushroom names to identifying totally forgettable fungus, from finding wonder in a fungus smaller than your pinkie fingernail to realizing you are standing on a mushroom larger than your driveway. If edibles are found they will be cooked and samples will be offered. Fee: $10 Per Person, minimum of 10 participants/maximum of 20

RSVP @ 715-758-6999 to reserve your spot.

Fastest Growing Small Craft Beer Brewery Introduces Its Brand To Green Bay Area

DE PERE, Wis. (WBAY) - The number one fastest growing small craft beer brewery in Wisconsin is introducing its brand to the Green Bay area.

Pigeon River Brewing Company out of Marion was awarded the title this week by the Brewers Association organization. The brewery is also the 11th fastest growing in the entire country. The list was based on how much each micro-brewery produced.

“It was kind of a shock being that we are so small yet, so it was kind of a surprise to me,” said Nathan Knaack, owner of Pigeon River Brewing Co.

Pigeon River Brewing Company started in 2012 with no employees. Today, the brewery has 19 employees and produces 1,300 barrels a year in house.

“We have a Wet Willy Oatmeal Stout, we got a Hop Offer IPA, we got a Buxom Lash Scottish Ale, and so much more. We try to hit every single market segment with the flavors we produce,” said Knaack.

According to the Brewers Association organization, the list of fastest growing small craft breweries had a median growth of 163 percent in production.

It’s no doubt the craft beer market is saturated, even in the state. The organization says in 2011, Wisconsin had more than 50 craft breweries, and now that number is above 160.

“Ultimately it comes down to demand and potential in the marketplace,” said Knaack. “So coming from zero potential where we had, started getting recognition from beer festivals, different events, then we started to come on the radar.”

With the number of craft breweries and offerings at retailers on the rise, how are brewers able to stay afloat? Beer experts say it’s the local tie that garners the support of the community.

“I think it really comes back to being a small business in your town, and so they’re independently owned, they’re small breweries, you can go support your community, go support your neighbor by buying products made right where you live,” said Jess Baker, editor-in-chief of Craftbeer.com.

Knaack says he could have opened his brewery elsewhere, but knew the small city of Marion, where he grew up, would be the perfect place.

“As far as distribution goes, you know, our marketing goes down to that we basically tell our story and that’s what people like to hear.” Said Knaack. “I’m a local boy from a small town, so I stick to that, stick to our roots, and that’s what people like.”

Pigeon River Brewing Company debuted their beer at the Wine Cellar and the Keweenaw Pub in De Pere on Friday. On Saturday the brewery will hold events at Ridgeview Liquor in Ashwaubenon and Mr. Brew’s Taphouse in De Pere.

Clintonville High School – Packers Gift $2,500

14th Annual Tailgate Tour Visits Clintonville

By Richard Ryman, Green Bay Press-Gazette
That was before they got on the bus at Lambeau Field Tuesday morning. Their messages to high school students in Clintonville and junior high students in Stevens Point were uplifting, focusing on healthy living, respect, opposing bullying, and discipline in pursuit of a goal. And the loudest “Go Pack Go!” cheers they could manage.

Former players on the tour, which runs through Saturday, include Grant (running back, 2007-2011 with the Packers), Barnett (linebacker, 2003-2010), Earl Dotson (offensive tackle, 1993-2002), Bernardo Harris (linebacker, 1995-2001), Scott Wells (center, 2004-2011) and Aaron Kampman (defensive end, 2002-2009). All have Super Bowl rings except Kampman, “who missed it by that much.”

FCCU Bike to the Beat

Bike to the Beat is a bike ride for all abilities from the fast, recreational, to beginner, and families. Choose any distance: 10, 20, 36, or 48 mile routes. You can pedal to the beat of the music as this bike ride is part of the Mile of Music with plenty of live music (and complimentary food & beverages) on the course, too. After your ride, stick around to enjoy even more music and a finishers party at Jones Park. More information to come soon! Register here.

About the Course

This course is one of a kind. It begins in Appleton, hitting the picturesque Telulah Trail right along the Fox River. It then connects to the CE Trail passing through Combined Locks and then to downtown Kaukauna where you can overlook the tumbling waters of the Fox River. You will pass by the famous Grignon Mansion and then follow the west side of the Fox River to Wrightstown. Next the course continues of the NEW Wrightstown bridge, out into the countryside and follows the east side of the river back to Kaukauna and then back to Jones Park.

This community event is sponsored by Fox Communities Credit Union.

School Day is Extended by 10 Min. Starts on Monday, April 29, 2019

The Clintonville School District Board of Education has determined that the best way to make up snow days and meet state requirements for minutes of instruction, is to add ten minutes to each day (for Middle and High School students ONLY), beginning Monday, April 29th. Because of this, Grades 5-12 will begin at 7:55 am. and the day will end at 3:20 pm. In addition, June 6th will no longer be a half day, but rather a full day of school for ALL students, kindergarten-11th grade. We feel this is the best way to make up instruction without adding additional days to the school year. School bus pick up times will not change; however, drop off times may be approximately five minutes later.

Cellcom offers IoT Solutions for Business

Cellcom has introduced a line-up of Internet of Things (IoT) sensors to help businesses manage and monitor various aspects of their operations. The IoT solutions from Monnit are a collection of wireless sensors that are embedded with power and internet connectivity to remotely monitor elements, activity, conditions, materials and more.

There are more than 60 sensors available that monitor everything from air and water temperature, to motion and vibration, to gas and electricity and more. These wireless sensors are battery powered, hardwired for AC or solar powered and work with a Monnit gateway and Cellcom's Cradlepoint router to send alerts to a user based on sensor data. These real-time alerts can be delivered via text, email, mobile application or web portal and are designed to help businesses constantly monitor aspects of their operation without manpower.

Deploying an IoT sensor can save time, money and resources. Use cases range from detecting problems early before they become bigger, more expensive ones or automatically tracking assets for security and efficiency. They could also be installed to monitor conditions to identify optimal trends or harmful environments. From retail to agriculture, property management to industrial settings, the sensors have applications for a host of vertical markets.

Cellcom IoT solutions are easy to deploy and easy to maintain with a 10+ year battery life, over-the-air updates and no additional software required. Sensors start at $79.95 and monthly service plans start at just $6/month.

To learn more visit www.cellcom.com/loT or visit www.youtube.com/mycellcom for a look at some of the sensors in action.

Cellcom is the preferred provider for the Chamber of Commerce

Donations Needed for Flowers on Main Street

Many visitors compliment our beautiful flowers on Main Street, it truly is stunning to see our baskets hanging from Main Street. It will soon be time to beautify our Main Street with flowers. The baskets need to be planted soon and we need your help to make this happen.

As you may know this is not a budgeted item for the city. The Clintonville tourism committee will be responsible for arranging this effort. The total cost is $3500 for the baskets. Each basket is about $100 to purchase but any donation would be greatly appreciated.

When making your donation at city hall please make your Memorial request at that time. The urns will be planted by the Clintonville garden club. What a great partnership.

Thank you in advance from the members of Clintonville Tourism Committee.

8 Biggest Home Staging Mistakes Part II

5 – Your pet may be your best friends but he isn't every one's.

Some buyers are immediately turned off by any signs of animals in a home so keep pet hair to a minimum by vacuuming everyday, crating your furry friends or keeping them outside of the home while it is up for sale. When we were selling our home a few years ago, I went as far as paying my younger brother to "babysit" them during my open house.

6 – Pay attention to the details.

Don't hide your flaws, either repair them before you go on market or have your price reflect that there is some work to be done. It is tough for a realtor to justify selling a house for top dollar when it is not in top condition.

7 – Upgrade periodically.

Change up your light fixtures, hardware, taps, faucets and drapery. You will likely get a better reaction from buyers plus it shows that the house has been maintained and cared for. Plus buyers are willing to pay more for a property that has already been updated. Not sure where to update or what to do? This is where your real estate agent and home stager can really come into play.

8 – Don't rush.

Get your house on the market once it is ready. Meaning get the little jobs done, listen to your realtor and home stager to help you get top dollar, an incomplete house is exactly that and buyers will not respond in a positive way. So take that time to finish up incomplete projects or tackle the to-do list from your stager – painting and small repairs can set you apart. Any time of year is a good time to sell, but when there is a lot of competition on the market (such as the spring season) you must be in peak performance.

Selling can feel personal but it isn't – you need to now think of your house as a product that is up for sale. Like a product in a store you want it to sell so put the time into making it a product that a buyer will want! Be sure to avoid these home staging mistakes,

Schley Builds Custom

Schley Buildings takes pride in the material we provide for a building, we know our name is represented by every building that has been built by us. Tim is always researching new products and looking for different suppliers to assure that you are not only getting the highest quality product but are paying the best price for that product. This philosophy carries over with all the materials used in erecting a Post Frame Structure, from the concrete pads in the ground to the Cupola's on the top of the roof. Offering the best building for the best price takes a lot of research and Tim is more than eager to invest that time for you. Give us a call @ 715-823-6109 or visit our website, schleybuildings.com, to learn more about having Schley Buildings get you the building you need.

Clintonville Lions Sells Roses

ANOTHER SUCCESSFUL ROSE SALE!

Yesterday club members delivered 160 dozen roses ordered during their annual spring rose sale. Here Lions Octe Mattson and Sara Mullen-Hornung select the roses they will be delivering.

Wanta's Floral and Gifts arranges for the club's purchase of the roses and provides the floor space to display the many containers of roses for members to pickup and deliver.

The club would like to thank everyone who purchased roses! Profits from the sale are returned to the community through various service projects.

Nature's Pathways April 2019

By Steve Barnett

“I suppose I will have to do these for the rest of my life.” This is a refrain I occasionally hear from patients when I give them a few exercises for their diagnosed condition. Their tone is tantamount to having to take out the garbage, another chore in life. When I hear these words, I share my story.

Approximately five years ago, after another episode of low back pain, I decided enough was enough. I needed to focus on prevention as opposed to all too frequently being in the treatment mode. Yes, even we, physical therapists, suffer from the same ailments that plague our patients. Knowing the physical limitations that I experienced with daily life and fitness activities, I came up with six exercises that I began to do every morning before leaving the house.

Over the last five years I have not had those recurring episodes of low back pain. My rotation with my golf swing is not encumbered. I feel loose and springy, ready to begin the day upon leaving the house every morning. I have come to realize that this is not a chore. Instead it is five minutes I look forward to every morning.

Our family cat is also in on the routine. If she is in the same room and she sees me get on the floor to do my exercise, she joins in. It is not uncommon to see her rolling around on her back next to me, my wife fondly referring to it as “cat yoga.” My daily motive is to loosen my body, to counter the positions I tend to gravitate to on a daily basis, and feel better. Her motive is to get attention and receive pets.

Let me share my observations of our cat that have been noted over time. After every slumber, which is quite often throughout a day, she stretches at the exact spot she was laying. It is not uncommon to see her arch her back, or stretch out her front paws and reach back into a child’s pose, or stretch one leg back and then the other as if she is a sprinter at the starting line getting ready to get into the starting blocks. This is part of her life (and that of other cats upon observation) that is intuitively done, and I don’t hear her bellyaching about “something I have to do for the rest of my life.”

I encourage everybody to adopt a routine of range of motion or stretching activities to perform within the first few hours of the day. No two people are the same with regard to body type, daily activity demands and medical history, all of which come in to play in determining what an individual program will entail. My brief program has been tailored to counter my postures throughout the day, address rotation for my golf swing, tight calves I experience when I run, and my back history.

How should one proceed? Obtain advice from a physical therapist who can listen to your story and examine your body movements to determine a brief morning routine. A trainer or yoga instructor may be able to help as well.

Your body will thank you for this devotion and will leave a smile on your face as you address the rest of your day.

ThedaCare Provider Explains the Risk

NEENAH, Wis. – Wh APPLETON, Wis. – When actor Luke Perry died from stroke in March, it made headlines — and shocked many because of his age. At 52, slim and seemingly healthy, Perry didn't seem like a high risk for stroke.

“The truth is, stroke can happen at any age,” said Simone Fearon, MD, Medical Director and Physician Leader with ThedaCare Cardiovascular Care. “Your best course of action is to know your risk profile. Then you can make informed decisions and take steps to reduce your risk as much as you can.”

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), 34% of people hospitalized for stroke in U.S. hospitals in 2009 were younger than 65.

There are two broad types of stroke — ischemic and hemorrhagic. More than 85% are ischemic strokes, meaning blood flow to the brain is blocked, usually by a blood clot. Hemorrhagic strokes happen when a blood vessel in the brain bursts, flooding surrounding tissue. More than 35% of hemorrhagic strokes are fatal. Ischemic strokes have a much higher survival rate, about 90%. But both kinds of stroke can cause disability, affecting language, motor, cognition and sensory skills.

The sooner treatment for stroke can begin, the lower the risk of disability or death. Because most people associate stroke with older adults, it may not be recognized right away in younger people, which can delay treatment.

So it's important for people of all ages to know the possible signs:

- Loss of speech or slurred speech
- Facial droop, often on one side of the face
- Weakness, especially on one side of the body
- Vision loss or double vision
- Dizziness and difficulty walking

“Knowing your risk profile is a key step in preventing stroke — and age is one risk factor you can't control,” said Dr. Fearon. “Stroke risk is highest after age 65, but stroke can happen at any age.”

Two more risk factors you can't control are gender and ethnicity. Stroke risk is nearly twice as high for African Americans as for Caucasians, and African Americans are more likely to die of stroke. Women are also at higher risk; more than 60% of stroke deaths are in women. Stroke kills about twice as many women as breast cancer.

Family history is also a factor. If you have family members with a history of heart disease, you may be at an increased risk for stroke and heart attack. Certain genetic diseases or disorders, such as sickle cell anemia, can also increase risk.

Other risk factors for stroke can be controlled or managed, including:

- Tobacco use. Both smoking and vaping have been linked with a higher risk for stroke.
- Excess weight. Obesity is a major risk factor for many serious health problems, including stroke.
- High blood pressure. Uncontrolled hypertension can increase your risk for stroke, heart attack and other cardiovascular events.

- High cholesterol. High levels of LDL cholesterol in the arteries can block normal blood flow to the brain and cause a stroke.
- Diabetes. If blood sugar is too high, it can prevent oxygen and other nutrients from reaching the brain. Diabetes also increases the risk for high blood pressure, a major risk factor for stroke.
- Drug abuse. Methamphetamines, cocaine and other street drugs can trigger spasms in blood vessels that can lead to stroke.

“Even if you have a family history of stroke, someone else's story doesn't have to be your story,” Dr. Fearon stresses.

She suggests making small changes that will gradually lower your risk.

“By changing behavior while you're young, you can lower your risk now and for years to come. We kind of all know at the subconscious level what we need to do. We need to keep these conversations going to bring it into the conscious level as we make our day-to-day choices,” she said.

Also, it's never too early to talk to your physician.

“Your doctor can discuss ways that can potentially lower your personal risk through lifestyle changes, medication or other preventive steps,” Fearon added. “Stroke doesn't have to be part of your story.”

Kerber Rose – Record Retention Guidelines

Federal Tax Records

Most tax advisors recommend that you retain copies of your finished tax returns indefinitely to prove that you actually filed. Even if you don't keep the returns indefinitely, hold onto them for at least six years after they're due or filed, whichever is later.

Guidelines for Small Businesses

The retention guidelines are slightly different for small business records. Here are some best practices to consider.

Business Property

Records used to substantiate the cost and deductions (such as depreciation, amortization and depletion) associated with business property must be maintained to determine the basis and gain (or loss) on the sale. Keep these for as long as you own the asset, plus seven years, according to IRS guidelines.

Travel Records

For travel and transportation expenses supported by mileage logs and other receipts, keep supporting documents for the three-year statute of limitations.

Sales Tax Returns

State regulations vary. For example, New York generally requires sales tax records to be retained for three years, while California requires four years, and Arkansas, six. Check with your tax advisor.

Employee and Payroll Records

Keep personnel records for three years after an employee has been terminated. Also maintain records that support employee earnings for at least four years. This time frame should cover various state and federal requirements. However, never throw away records that might involve unclaimed property, such as a final paycheck not claimed by a former employee.

Time cards specifically must be kept for at least three years if your business engages in interstate commerce and is subject to the Fair Labor Standards Act. However, it's a best practice for all businesses to keep the files for several years in case questions arise.

Keep employment tax records for four years from the date the tax was due or the date it was paid, whichever is longer.

Important: The more records you store, the greater the likelihood that your data will be stolen or hacked. Destroying sensitive documents and files can reduce the chances that you or your company's employees and customers will become identity theft victims.

It's a good idea to keep records that support items shown on your individual tax return until the statute of limitations runs out — generally, three years from the due date of the return or the date you filed, whichever is later. Examples of supporting documents include canceled checks and receipts for alimony payments, charitable contributions, mortgage interest payments and retirement plan contributions. You can also file an amended tax return during this time frame if you missed a deduction, overlooked a credit or misreported income.

Which records can you throw away today? You can generally throw out records for the 2015 tax year, for which you filed a return in 2016.

You're not necessarily safe from an IRS audit after three years, however. There are some exceptions to the three-year rule. For example, if the IRS has reason to believe your income was understated by 25% or more, the statute of limitations for an audit increases to six years. Or, if there's suspicion of fraud or you don't file a tax return at all, there's no time limit for the IRS to launch an inquiry.

In addition, records that support figures affecting multiple years, such as carryovers of charitable deductions or casualty losses for federal disasters, need to be saved until the deductions no longer have effect, plus seven years, according to IRS instructions.

There are also some cases when taxpayers get more than the usual three years to file an amended return. For example, you have up to seven years to take deductions for bad debts or worthless securities, so don't toss out records that could result in refund claims for those items.

State Tax Records

The previous guidelines are all geared toward complying with federal tax obligations. Ask your tax advisor how long you should keep your records for state tax purposes, because some states have different statutes of limitations for auditing tax returns.

Plus, if you've been audited by the IRS, states generally have the right to resolve their own issues related to that tax year within a CONTINUED on PAGE 31

a year of the federal audit's completion. So, hold on to all tax records related to an IRS audit for a year after it's completed.

Essential Personal Records

Your files probably contain more than just tax information. Certain essential documents should be kept indefinitely. Examples include:

Birth and death certificates,
Marriage licenses and divorce decrees,
Social Security cards, and Military discharge papers.

These should be kept in a safe location, such as a locked file cabinet or safety deposit box. If stolen, essential documents can be used to steal your identity. In turn, a stolen identity can be used to file for bogus tax refunds or apply for credit under your name.

Bills and Receipts

In general, it's OK to shred most bills — like phone bills or credit card statements — when your payment clears your bank account or at year end. However, if a bill or receipt supports an item on your tax return, follow the tax guidance above.

If you purchase a big-ticket item — like jewelry, furniture or a computer — keep the bill for as long as you have the item. You never know if you'll need to substantiate an insurance claim in the event of loss or damage.

Real Estate Records

Keep your real estate records for as long as you own the property, plus three years after you dispose of it, and report the transaction on your tax return. Throughout ownership, keep records of the purchase, as well as receipts for home improvements, relevant insurance claims and documents relating to refinancing.

These documents help prove your adjusted basis in the home, which is needed to figure any taxable gain at the time of sale. They can also support calculations for rental property or home office deductions.

PROFESSIONAL HEADSHOT

Wednesday May 22nd 2019, 9-4pm at the Clintonville Area Chamber of Commerce.

Having a professional headshot that represents you and your business is crucial in this day and age—sometimes it is the first impression people see of you on your website or social media. A quality headshot adds an invaluable level of professionalism, and that is why the Chamber has partnered with Appeal Digital Image and Design to provide a convenient location and a special session rate for members and their employees.

Sign up and reserve your session.

Sessions are in 15 minute segments. Please arrive 5 minutes early to ensure you are ready as soon as your session starts. To make a reservation for your session please start by viewing the session schedule by following the link below. Email administrativeassistant@clintonvillechamber.com with the time slot of choice and your email and phone number. You will receive a confirmation email once you have been added to the schedule by the chamber assistant.

You will have multiple photo background options to choose from. Each unlimited-use retouched digital image will be $25 and will be sent to you via email. If you are interested, ask about print options during your session.

To ensure your session, sign up by Monday 20th

The Spring Cruise Car Show is an annual event, taking place on the third Friday in May in downtown Clintonville, Wisconsin.

This event will take place on the "Main Drag" from 5 to 9 p.m. and will be held rain or shine. Dash plaques will be awarded to the first 200 cars preregistered for the show. A concession stand will be available and a 50-50 raffle will also be held. Music and announcements will be provided throughout the evening by Dr. Rock.

First place and runner-up trophies will be presented in fifteen categories, as well as special awards for the Mayor's Choice, Police Chief's Choice, and the Chamber's Choice.

Investment Account Statements

To accurately report taxable events involving stocks and bonds, you must maintain detailed records of purchases and sales. These records should include dates, quantities, prices, and dividend reinvestment and investment expenses, such as brokers' fees. It's a good idea to keep these records for as long as you own the investments, plus until the expiration of the statute of limitations for the relevant tax returns.

Likewise, the IRS requires you to keep copies of Forms 8606, 5498 and 1099-R until all the money is withdrawn from your IRAs. With Roth IRAs, it's more important than ever to hold onto all IRA records pertaining to contributions and withdrawals in case you're ever questioned.

If an account is closed, treat IRA records with the same rules that apply to stocks and bonds. Don't dispose of any ownership documentation until the statute of limitations expires.
